

We have more tables

We have just bought 6 more tables. So we now have 9 all the same size. Also we still have two larger ones. Please see the photo of three tables together, one is the old darker brown ones with the 'lip' and the one remaining coloured in Japanese Beech and our new ones that are Beech. Can you tell which the old one is?

We also have two of the 'tools' to assist with releasing the legs. In the discussions before purchase there had been comments that the legs were difficult to close. To help you we have two and at they each have a special place by where we keep the tables.

Additionally the notice asks that tables are stacked 'top to top' and 'feet to feet'. .This is important so that the feet do not rub on the table tops.

William Waddilove

Old brown top one is at the far end. Which of the other two is the new one?

The tool and the storage place above the tables.